China's 60th: What the World is Saying

The People's Republic of China is 60 years old. While the country is celebrating, what is the rest of the world thinking? read more

Voices

"We've got the classic case of a Western government yet again conceding to Chinese pressure that is imaginary long after that Chinese pressure has ceased to exist.... The Chinese must be falling over themselves with astonishment at what Western diplomats will give them without being asked. I don't know what the poker analogy would be.

"Please, see all my cards and take my money, too?"

– Robert Barnett, Columbia University Tibetan specialist, discussing the Obama administration's decision for President Obama to postpone meeting the Dalai Lama until after his November trip to China. Barnett was quoted by the Washington Post on October 5, 2009.
